

The Imagi-Nation

The nation as a cultural category

Research Methodologies in European Cultures and Societies

Maria José Canelo

14.11.2024

“The idea of a man (sic) without a nation seems to impose a [great] strain on the modern imagination. A man must have a nationality as he must have a nose and two ears.”

(Ernest Gellner, 1983: 6).

“All this seems obvious, though, alas, it is not true. But that it should have come to seem so very obviously true is indeed an aspect, perhaps the very core, of the problem of nationalism. Having a nation is not an inherent attribute of humanity, but it has now come to appear as such.”

(Ernest Gellner, 1983: 6).

Nationhood expresses in everyday life and the most commonsensical gestures

Banal Nationalism, Michael Billig
(1995)

Exercise 1

GROUP WORK:

picture analysis and comment: identify aspects of banal nationalism

NATION – NATIONHOOD
BELONGING

The country – the State – the nation

Territory e nationality – citizenship –
– cultural identity

NATIONAL identity is a cultural construction
→ questions of MEANING

Benedict Anderson,
Imagined Communities (1983)

Why do people answer the national appeal?

How do they identify with the nation?

Why do they believe they are a particular
nation?

Why are people willing to die for the nation?

Benedict Anderson, Imagined Communities:

- The nation is a MODERN SECULAR ARTIFACT
- It replaced declining discourses, e.g. religion (the soldier as the modern martyr)
- It benefitted from print capitalism (the time of simultaneity)
- The rise of the national framework - democracies replacing monarchies - demanded new forms of authority (e.g. the power of the people)

Benedict Anderson, Imagined Communities:

The NATION is:

“an imagined political community - and imagined as both inherently limited and sovereign.

It is imagined because the members of even the smallest nation will never know most of their fellow-members,
meet them, or even hear of them, yet in the minds of each lives the image of their communion.” (6)

B. Anderson:

Nations are not false; they are artificial in the sense that they are malleable – they reinvent themselves through new or resignified meanings, according to different contexts, needs, and aspirations:

“... it is imagined as a community, because, regardless of the actual inequality and exploitation that may prevail in each, the nation is always conceived as a deep, horizontal comradeship.

Ultimately it is this fraternity that makes it possible, over the past two centuries, for so many millions of people, not so much to kill, as willingly to die for such limited imaginings.” (7; my emphasis)

Popular metaphors: the family, the blood, the sacred land, ...

Social construction theory (v. primordialism):

→ Dismantling the essentialism of the nation:

The nation offers itself as a master NARRATIVE that assigns
MEANING and ORDER to the experience of a particular people, understood as a homogeneous community

|

Homogeneity is forged in the discourses of literature, culture [myths of origin, legends, symbols], language, history, politics, religion, 'race', ...

The nation is therefore a SYMBOLIC entity

National(ist) discourse casts the autonomy, authenticity, and identity of the national community through

REPRESENTATIONS and SYMBOLS of national UNITY and PRIDE

What's in a nation-state?

→ *The nation as a source of BELONGING

- people/community (ethnicity, kinship)
- A location – a territory
- Sovereignty – a political entity (borders)
- Language; religion; attitudes, behaviors, values & beliefs
- Memory; history; a legacy/past & a future - tradition + mission projected onto the future
- Figures of heroes and martyrs

The role of symbols

The hymn or the flag (mostly invented during the RISE of the NATIONAL FRAMEWORK, late 18th-early 19th cent.)

National types or heroes that can represent and appeal to what the people have IN COMMON (myth)

→ All of these reinforce the imagining of the community as ONE and UNIQUE

The US flag

1777 / 1795 / 1818 / 1912 / 1960

The time of the nation

- The new temporality of the nation (B.Anderson) relies heavily on the understanding and use of the time of TRADITION:

Traditions create spaces or moments of imobility: when the present connects directly with the past

Through repetition, the past is reenacted as if it were the present, and thereby re-authenticated (e.g. the celebration of national holidays; the cult of national heroes; particular practices of folk culture; ...)

Hobsbawm & Ranger, The Invention of Tradition

TIME - TRADITION – MEMORY

“a set of practices, normally governed by overtly or tacitly accepted rules and of a ritual or symbolic nature [v. pragmatic], which seek to inculcate certain values and norms of behaviour by repetition, which automatically implies continuity with the past.”

“For all invented traditions, so far as possible, use history as a legitimator of action and cement of group cohesion.”

Time – history - memory

- Collective memory → organizes in institutions (e.g. museums and monuments)
- |
‘Invented traditions’
→ The past is mobilized in the present to provide a sense of continuity (legitimacy; nostalgia)

Memorialization

- Whose memory?
Exclusive processes of
memorialization
- Edward Colston statue,
Bristol

Memorialization

- Whose memory?
Inclusive
processes of
memorialization

Traces of the Berlin Wall, Berlin

Memory as commodity

A board game based on the Portuguese navigations, titled “Caravels”, which invites players to embark in an adventure through ‘seas never navigated before’ and recreate the experience of the construction of the Portuguese empire by means of commercial gain and success, always emphasizing the glory of these endeavours.

(SpielPortugal online)

- If the nation is typically attached to the idea of a fixed, material, territory, where the origins of the community can be found and therefore its roots as well,

MIGRATIONS have posed the biggest challenges to that idealization of the place of origin and a corresponding homogeneous people

Stuart Hall on cultural identity:

The concept of DIASPORA allowed us to reconfigure 'identity' as a category in process, a constellation of reference points, provisory or strategic positionings (Hall, 225)

Hall's proposal:

"the diaspora experience . . . is defined not by essence or purity, but by the recognition of a necessary heterogeneity and diversity; by a conception of 'identity' which lives with and through, not despite, difference; by hybridity. Diaspora identities are those which are constantly reproducing themselves anew, through transformation and difference." (235)

“Nuestro Himno”

Somos Americanos (2006)

Bibliographical references:

- Anderson, Benedict. Imagined Communities. Reflections on the Origins and Spread of Nationalism. Verso, 2006. [1983].
- Hobsbawm, Eric and Terence Ranger. The Invention of Tradition. Cambridge UP, 1983.
- “Nuestro Himno”, Somos Americanos. Various Artists. 2006.
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=zCXJ9GxNVDo> (10.11.24)
- +
- Billig, Michael. Banal Nationalism. Sage, 1995.
- Gellner, Ernest. Nations and Nationalism. U of Cornell P, 1983.
- Hall, Stuart. “Cultural Identity and Diaspora”. Identity, Community, Culture, Difference. Lawrence & Wishart, 1990, 222.237.